Expert Witness Index 2017

Expert Witness Index 2017

Following the successful launch of our online expert witness directory in October last year, I am very pleased to introduce the published Expert Witness Index 2017.

This concise and accessible guide features a wide range of experts by specialist area of work and location. I hope you will find it useful for finding experienced experts that will provide essential technical analysis and opinion evidence in court and reports.

All our listed individuals and companies have demonstrated experience and ability in providing expert witness services through an application process and professional references and have agreed to our code of practice. Many also have specific training in report writing and giving evidence in court.

If you need more in-depth information about any of the experts, you will be able to find their full profile detailing qualifications and experience in the online directory.

www.lawscot.org.uk/members/expert-witness-directory.

Charlotta Cederqvist
Head of Business Development

Experts who would like to find out more about how to be listed in the Directory should phone 0131 476 8166 or email CharlottaCederqvist@lawscot.org.uk

THE CHECKING PROCESS

The directory is comprised of expert witnesses who live and work in Scotland, and expert witnesses who are based in other areas but are willing to travel to Scotland to work. New experts applying to be listed are required to demonstrate experience and ability in providing expert witness services, normally by providing references from two solicitors holding practising certificates who have instructed them within the last three years.

The reference form asks the referee to rate from very good to very poor several aspects of the expert witness's report: accuracy; understanding and analysis of the expert subject area; presentation; and adherence to timescale. Where the expert has presented evidence in court, referees are asked to rate their understanding of the court's requirements, and the preparation, content and delivery of the expert's evidence.

Referees are asked whether they have received any adverse comment from the judge or others which gives them cause to doubt the expert's expertise and whether the referee would use the expert again or recommend the expert to other solicitors.

Where any of the ratings fall below "good", the references are carefully scrutinised. Other than in very exceptional cases, low ratings lead to the expert's exclusion from the listing of checked experts.

It is always the responsibility of the instructing practitioner to ensure that any expert witness possesses the knowledge and experience required for each individual case.

Individual expert witnesses and corporate expert firms

All experts listed in a corporate entry must provide satisfactory references for their individual work as expert witnesses. In addition, all firms must supply the name of a main contact person.

Other referees

One reference must be from a solicitor from the same jurisdiction as the expert witness, who has instructed him/her within the last three years. The other reference, also pertaining to instruction as an expert within the last three years, may be given by:

- practising solicitors/lawyers from Scotland, England or Wales
- lawyer from another jurisdiction
- advocate in Scotland or barrister in England, Wales, Ireland or Northern Ireland
- judge, sheriff or holder of other judicial office.

Cases where references have not been required

There are certain cases where our reference requirements have been superfluous because the expert has already passed through a rigorous accreditation process, which has included proven experience and understanding of expert witness work. In these cases, The Law Society of Scotland may accept experts who have worked for or been vetted by other organisations. The Law Society of Scotland will verify the procedures employed by other organisations to ensure that their procedures meet or exceed our requirements and will verify membership/employment where appropriate.

CODE SHOULD KEEP YOU RIGHT

A Code of Practice has been produced for the guidance of experts instructed by solicitors, which should be observed by those listed in this directory

The Law Society of Scotland has published a Code of Practice to assist expert witnesses engaged by solicitors in effectively meeting their needs, so those solicitors can better serve their clients and the interests of justice.

The Code is intended to be of general application and there may be additional requirements relating to cases in specialised areas of law.

At the outset, experts should ensure they receive clear instructions, in writing. In addition to basic information such as names, contact details, dates of incidents etc, these should cover the type of expertise called for, the questions to be addressed, history of the matter and details of any relevant documents. Experts should also be advised if proceedings have been commenced or if they may be required to give evidence.

When medical reports are involved, it must be highlighted whether the consent of the client or patient has been given, and in cases concerning children, that the paramountcy of the child's welfare may override the legal professional privilege attached to the report and that disclosure might be required.

Instructions should only be accepted when the expert is fully qualified to speak on the matter and has the resources to complete the matter within an agreed timeframe. Experts should provide terms of business for agreement prior to accepting instructions. Solicitors must be notified if any part of the assignment will be undertaken by parties other than the individual instructed.

Client confidentiality must be observed.

Finally, the bases of charging must be agreed on the outset as part of the instructions. This includes expected project fee, travelling expenses, etc.

Guidance is also given as to the content of the report prepared, which should be in plain English with any technical terms explained.

References to the directory

An expert listed in the directory may describe themselves only as listed. The expert may not refer to this listing as a qualification or describe themselves as approved, accredited, or recommended by The Law Society of Scotland.

Independence and complaints

Once they have accepted instructions from a solicitor, experts are under a duty to provide an objective and independent opinion relating to the case.

The key to being an expert is maintaining independence. When giving evidence at court, the role is to assist the court. Any and all personal or professional relationships, business dealings and competing interests must be fully advised to the solicitors at the start of each project. Experts should withdraw if a conflict of interest arises.

Experts should also provide a procedure for resolving any complaints, and respond quickly and appropriately if any complaint arises.

The Law Society of Scotland reserves the right to exclude any expert who has failed to adhere to the Code of Practice from any future edition of the Directory of Expert Witnesses.

This article provides only an overview of the Code of Conduct. For a complete and comprehensive guide, please visit www.lawscot.org.uk/members/expert-witness-directory/expert-witness-code-of-practice/ (shortcut: bit.ly/2qxL4fc)

ALL IN TOGETHER

‘Hot-tubbing’, or concurrent expert evidence, has been used for the first time in a Scottish civil court case. Is the experience likely to be repeated? Katherine Doran reports

At the end of 2016, Lord Woolman issued his decision in SSE Generation Ltd v Hochtief Solutions AG [2016] CSOH 177. The case concerned liability for the collapse of part of a water-bearing tunnel at Glendoe hydroelectric station in Fort Augustus.

This was one of the longest and most technically complex cases to come before the Scottish courts in recent years. The court sat for 91 days; 73,000 documents were lodged, including 37 expert reports and 91 witness statements. Of those, 19 experts gave evidence at proof, and 46 witnesses of fact.

The court was faced with the challenge of hearing and comprehending technically difficult expert evidence on matters such as structural geology, rock mechanics and tunnel engineering.

The case was the first in the Court of Session to use “hot-tubbing” to hear expert evidence. Hot-tubbing, or concurrent evidence, is a process whereby expert witnesses of the same or similar disciplines give their evidence at the same time in a structured discussion, with the judge acting as chairperson.

Concurrent expert evidence is already a feature of civil litigation in England, with a suggested procedure set out in Practice Direction 35, supplementing the Civil Procedure Rules, Part 35. It is also commonly used in arbitration and other forms of ADR. So what does it entail?

Views from experience

The procedure adopted by Lord Woolman mirrored that set down in Practice Direction 35. His Lordship was also guided by video demonstrations from the Judicial Committee of the New South Wales Commission. It was essentially this:

- Counsel for the parties agreed in advance a list of suggested topics to be discussed during the concurrent evidence session.

- Lord Woolman initiated the discussion between the expert witnesses by asking one of them to set out his position on a particular issue, then inviting the others to participate in the discussion, questioning one another as appropriate.
- Counsel were invited to ask follow-up questions.

A 2016 report by the Civil Justice Council on hot-tubbing (online at bit.ly/2oQRGGC), found the procedure is well liked by judges and practitioners alike. This view was echoed by Lord Woolman in his judgment at para 258: “I found it an extremely valuable exercise and one which I would repeat in suitable future cases. Instead of hearing complex testimony weeks apart, I was able to hear the different opinions at one and the same time. They were also able to challenge one another’s position. This brought the topics into sharp focus. Each expert had to crystallise his position.”

When considering the CJC’s report, the English Civil Procedure Rule Committee expressed some caution over the use of hot-tubbing. It noted that hot-tubbing required significant work and time, and early buy-in of all concerned. It was also felt that if hot-tubbing is used, there must be adequate safeguards in place to ensure fairness of the proceedings.

This was achieved in SSE v Hochtief by using hot-tubbing in addition to, and not instead of cross-examination, so both parties had sufficient opportunity to test the experts’ evidence. By hearing evidence concurrently, it was possible to focus the key issues and garner the respective positions of the experts on those issues.

Conditions for success

There are two major factors that will determine the success of hot-tubbing:

- Is the case suitable? Lord Woolman commented that the process was most useful where there was a narrow technical dispute – less so where there was little common ground between the parties or the level of detail was too great.
- Does the process have the support of all involved? Litigants will need to be comfortable with novel approaches to taking evidence. Expert witnesses need to understand the process and be confident asking and answering questions of one another. Solicitors and advocates will have to agree a procedure up front, and possibly an agenda of topics to be discussed. And finally, judges need to be fully engaged with the case in order to formulate suitable questions and chair a productive discussion.

Provided these criteria are met, there is no reason why hot-tubbing should not be used more widely. The opportunity for experts to discuss and question one another is a useful addition to the examination process. This interactive process is likely to crystallise positions, and highlight areas of agreement or divergence of expert opinion. Ideally, this will lead to more measured and reasonable positions being advanced, and ease the decision-making process.
