Expert Witness Directory 2022

I am very pleased to introduce the 2022 published Expert Witness Directory.

I hope you will find it useful for finding experienced experts that will provide essential technical analysis and opinion evidence in court and reports.

All our listed individuals and companies have demonstrated experience and ability in providing expert witness services through an application process and professional references and have agreed to our code of practice. Many also have specific training in report writing and giving evidence in court.

If you need more in-depth information about any of the experts, you will be able to find their full profile detailing qualifications and experience in our recently improved online directory www.lawscot.org.uk/members/expert-witness-directory.

We welcome any suggestions you may have for areas of expertise that you would like to see represented in the directory, or indeed recommendations of experts that you have worked with who may benefit from joining it. My contact details are listed below.

Through our CPD programme, we will continue to provide training for solicitors when instructing expert witnesses, most notably at our annual Personal Injury Conference. If you want to know more about the training, please email CPD@lawscot.org.uk.

If you are an expert witness and would like to find out more about how to be listed in the Law Society of Scotland Expert Witness Directory, please email angusmaclauchlan@lawscot.org.uk

WHO RATES OUR EXPERTS

Reference system underpins entries for all those listed in this index

The directory is comprised of expert witnesses who live and work in Scotland, and expert witnesses who are based in other areas but are willing to travel to Scotland to work. New experts applying to be listed are required to demonstrate experience and ability in providing expert witness services, normally by providing references from two solicitors holding practising certificates who have instructed them within the last three years.

The reference form asks the referee to rate from “very good” to “very poor” several aspects of the expert witness’s report: accuracy; understanding and analysis of the expert subject area; presentation; and adherence to timescale. Where the expert has presented evidence in court, referees are asked to rate their understanding of the court’s requirements, and the preparation, content and delivery of the expert’s evidence.

Referees are asked whether they have received any adverse comment from the judge or others which gives them cause to doubt the expert’s expertise and whether the referee would use the expert again or recommend the expert to other solicitors.

Where any of the ratings fall below “good”, the references are carefully scrutinised. Other than in very exceptional cases, low ratings lead to the expert’s exclusion from the listing of checked experts. It is always the responsibility of the instructing practitioner to ensure any expert witness possesses the knowledge and experience required for each individual case.

Individual expert witnesses and corporate expert firms

All experts listed in a corporate entry must provide satisfactory references for their individual work as expert witnesses. In addition, all firms must supply the name of a main contact person.

Other referees

One reference must be from a solicitor from the same jurisdiction as the expert witness, who has instructed him/her within the last three years. The other reference, also pertaining to instruction as an expert within the last three years, may be given by:

- practising solicitors/lawyers from Scotland, England or Wales
- a lawyer from another jurisdiction
- an advocate in Scotland or barrister in England, Wales, Ireland or Northern Ireland
- a judge, sheriff or holder of other judicial office.

Cases where references have not been required

There are certain cases where our reference requirements have been superfluous because the expert has already passed through a rigorous accreditation process, which has included proven experience and understanding of expert witness work. In these cases, the Law Society of Scotland may accept experts who have worked for or been vetted by other organisations. The Law Society of Scotland will verify the procedures employed by other organisations to ensure that their procedures meet or exceed our requirements and will verify membership/employment where appropriate.

CODE OF PRACTICE IS EXPERT SUPPORT

Law Society of Scotland Code published to assist expert witnesses engaged by solicitors

The Law Society of Scotland has published a Code of Practice to assist expert witnesses engaged by solicitors in effectively meeting their needs, so those solicitors can better serve their clients and the interests of justice.

The Code applies generally, but there may be additional requirements relating to cases in specialised areas of law. Experts must also comply with the code of conduct of any professional body to which they belong.

At the outset, experts should ensure they receive clear instructions, in writing. In addition to basic information such as names, contact details, dates of incidents, etc, these should cover the type of expertise called for, the questions to be addressed, history of the matter and details of any relevant documents. Experts should also be advised if proceedings have been commenced or if they may be required to give evidence.

When medical reports are involved, it must be highlighted whether the consent of the client or patient has been given, and in cases concerning children, that the paramountcy of the child's welfare may override the legal professional privilege attached to the report and that disclosure might be required.

Instructions should only be accepted when the expert is fully qualified to speak on the matter and has the resources to complete the matter within an agreed timeframe.

Experts should provide terms of business for agreement prior to accepting instructions, including rates of payment or the agreed project fee, and travelling expenses, etc.

Solicitors must be notified, and their agreement obtained, if any part of the assignment will be undertaken by anyone other than the individual instructed.

Client confidentiality must be observed.

Guidance is also given as to the content of the report prepared, which should be in plain English with any technical terms explained.

Independence and complaints

Once they have accepted instructions from a solicitor, experts are under a duty to provide an objective and independent opinion relating to the case.

The key to being an expert is maintaining independence. When giving evidence at court, the role is to assist the court. Any and all personal or professional relationships, business dealings and competing interests that might influence the expert's work must be fully advised to the solicitors at the start of each project. Experts should immediately withdraw if a conflict of interest arises.

Site visits or client meetings should first be discussed with the solicitor.

Experts should also provide a procedure for resolving any complaints, and respond quickly and appropriately if any complaint arises.

The Law Society of Scotland reserves the right to exclude any expert who has failed to adhere to the Code of Practice from any future edition of the Directory of Expert Witnesses.

This article provides only an overview of the Code of Practice. For a complete and comprehensive guide, please visit: www.lawscot.org.uk/members/business-support/expert-witness

EXPERT WITNESS: CASE LAW UPDATE

Meera Shah highlights some recent Scottish cases on the expert's role and duties in court, which practitioners should be aware of

While Part 35 of the English Civil Procedure Rules contains mandatory rules on duty and procedure that expert witnesses and their instructing parties in England & Wales must adhere to, there are currently no equivalent rules under Scottish law, and few rules of court that directly affect experts. Nevertheless, the compliance and conduct of an expert witness during a case held in Scotland can be critical to the outcome and/or the reliance placed on their evidence. Instructing parties are therefore advised to keep abreast of common law developments in this area, as well as ensuring that any experts they instruct have received up-to-date and relevant training on their role and conduct.

There have been several recent cases commenting on the role and conduct of expert witnesses. Below are a handful of the most relevant.

Expert's overriding duty

The position relating to an expert's duty was historically unclear until Ury Estate Ltd [2019] CSOH 36, which confirmed that it is the expert's duty to help the court on matters within their expertise, and this duty overrides any obligation to the person who instructed them, or the paying party. As such, expert opinion must be objective, unbiased and uninfluenced by the pressures of litigation; experts must not assume the role of an advocate and their evidence must be confined to their expertise.

Set out basis factors

T v W [2022] CSOH 44 is a personal injury case where a primary school teacher sought damages from her former employer for psychiatric injuries suffered during her employment. The pursuer objected to the evidence of the defender's expert witness, claiming that he had not followed Kennedy v Cordia (Services) [2016] SC (UKSC) 59 in stating "the facts or assumption on which his opinion is based", and "the relevant factual evidence so provided". The motion was refused by Lord

Summers, who found that the witness had complied with his duty under Kennedy v Cordia, as he had acknowledged that he had been supplied with precognitions, and the facts disclosed in his report were based on these precognitions.

Relevant expertise

Gemmell v Scottish Ministers [2022] SC GLW 16 is a common law negligence case where the pursuer alleged that specific duties were owed to him by the defenders in the exercise of reasonable care. While Sheriff Reid found the pursuer's expert witness to be "a thoroughly engaging and impressive witness", he felt that large sections of her report were entirely irrelevant, and he attached little weight to her evidence as he felt that "she did not have the relevant expertise to offer reliable opinion evidence on the key issues in this case".

Admissible and reliable?

Martin v Hughes [2021] CSOH 109 concerns a claim for unfair prejudice under the Companies Act 2006 by a minority shareholder in a limited company that provides accountancy services. The respondents claimed that the petitioner's expert failed to act as an independent expert witness to the standards set out in Kennedy v Cordia, on the basis that "His evidence as to the choice of valuation methodology... was, in essence and as he himself accepted, merely his say-so", and "Moreover, he had no contemporary, real world valuation experience." This was rejected by Lord Clark on the basis that the expert "obviously offered opinion evidence, but it was not, as suggested,

'merely his say-so'. Rather than being unsubstantiated ipse dixit, it was based upon quite standard features of the EBITDA approach". The judge went on to say that the expert "did have... appropriate experience", and that he explained, "with reasons, why the EBITDA approach for valuation... was to be preferred".

Disclosure of prior connections

Joint Liquidators of RFC 2012 plc, Noters [2021] CSOH 99 concerned an application by the joint liquidators of a football company under the Insolvency Act 1986. Lord Tyre addressed certain issues regarding the respondents' expert, stating that although he did not hold the expert's evidence as inadmissible (on the basis of Kennedy v Cordia), it must be treated with caution owing to the fact that his connections with one of the owners of the football company were not disclosed in his expert report. The explanation given by senior counsel failed "to have proper regard to the duty incumbent upon [the expert] himself to disclose prior connections".

Summary

Expert witnesses are assumed to be aware of and understand the terms of their appointment, including their duty to the court and the extent and limits of their role. As expert witness skills and disciplines are different to those of an expert's day job, the above cases emphasise the value of regular and up-to-date professional training to an expert witness to ensure they are kept abreast of all the key developments in common law regarding the scope of their duty and its application. Instructing solicitors are advised to bear this in mind when appointing and working with expert witnesses.
